

Being an effective Marxist at work

What does it mean to be an effective Marxist on the workplace? We can all agree that it's helpful to be respected as a union rep, but is that enough? How do we translate being well regarded into more active engagement by contacts with socialist activity both within and beyond the workplace?

- Briefly as a whole group we will agree what being an effective Marxist at work actually means – we're looking for some key criteria
- Then in small groups we will look at 3 questions:
 1. How does this relate to establishing yourself as a workplace militant in a new workplace or industry?
 2. What are the different challenges for well embedded comrades?
 3. How does consciousness change? What marks out the effective socialist activist in how they relate to their workmates?
- We will reconvene as a whole group to take feedback and draw conclusions

End of session
